

Over the next few years, we face the greatest assault on our profession and our professionalism in the 400-year history of medicine in Britain.

There are currently 70% more medical students than there were five years ago, but only a minimal increase in training places.

Junior doctors, already traumatised by MMC/MTAS 2007, face a recruitment round in less than two months in which competition ratios will be worse than this year, with some small specialties in some regions likely to be offering no ST3 posts at all. The process for selecting people into run-through for subspecialty training is in disarray. And 14,000 juniors face career termination.

Specialist Registrars have their own 'bulge' to look forward to in 2011 to 2013 because of a shortage of consultant posts.

Consultants have lost the ability to set clinical priorities for their patients and personal input into the recruitment of their teams.

Ministers, managers and administrators have muscled in on the doctor-patient relationship, and propaganda has labelled us arrogant, ivory-towered and money-grabbing.

And the professionalism of every doctor – our autonomy, our capacity for patient advocacy and to make decisions based on clinical priorities – is being steadily eroded.

It's time to reclaim our profession.

RemedyUK, born as a grassroots campaign, is now an independent organisation – a community of those concerned with the future of the profession.

It exists only because you wanted it to.

In 2007, Remedy became the voice of those opposed to and oppressed by MMC. We spoke out without fear, made it possible for over 12,000 doctors to take to the streets in London and Glasgow, to join a Mass Lobby of Parliament and to challenge the government through our application for judicial review.

Remedy's priority in the years ahead is to reclaim our profession. Join us.

RemedyUK exists to challenge flawed or prescriptive reforms and hold our institutions to account. We believe that our patients are best served by a well-educated and motivated workforce. Our aim is to provide a channel for the stifled voice of grassroots doctors, and to represent their interests at the highest level.

RemedyUK is committed to delivering maximum bang for your buck. Since August 2007, we have:-

- Raised your concerns with the Department of Health
- Held discussions with the BMA and the Royal Colleges
- Presented detailed oral evidence to the Tooke review and wholeheartedly welcomed its interim report
- Presented written and oral evidence to the House of Commons Health Select Committee inquiry into MMC/MTAS
- Arranged a Parliamentary briefing on workforce planning
- Won a review of physicians training costs
- Surveyed our members and produced a report on IMGs
- Organised a Silent Vigil to mark Sir Liam Donaldson's appearance before the Health Select Committee
- Set up our first advice clinic for juniors in coordination with the HCSA
- Set up a free-to-members rota service to ensure juniors are treated fairly
- Set up The Daily Remedy, our free-to-members online newspaper on medical issues
- Developed our Reps network to improve communications

Join us now, and you will:-

- Be able to vote at, and attend, our first AGM on April 19th 2008
- Have a voice on all Remedy issues and the ability to raise your own
- Receive rota and contractual advice in association with the HCSA
- Have access to our forum and our new policy board
- Be able to read our news site, The Daily Remedy
